

Brief Bio

Eugene S. Takle

Gene Takle is professor emeritus of agricultural meteorology in the Department of Agronomy at Iowa State University.

Professor Takle was a founding member of the multi-institutional team that has produced regional scenarios of future climates under the North American Regional Climate Change Assessment Program. He has been a co-author of the 3rd (2014) and 4th (2018) US National Climate Assessments and 2007 report of the UN Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change.

He is a Fellow of the American Meteorological Society (AMS) and has been an AMS Certified Consulting Meteorologist since 1984. He served a six year term on the Board of Trustees for the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research.

His research since retiring focuses on boundary-layer impacts of climate change on the Midwest, especially agriculture, and studies of the efficiency of utility-scale wind farms and their interaction with agriculture. His recent paper in Physics Today entitled "Iowa's agriculture is losing its Goldilocks climate" describes how global climate change is providing new challenges to Iowa agriculture.

Dr. Takle hold a BA degree in physics and mathematics from Luther College and a PhD in physics from Iowa State University.
